accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Bonneau, they found it mighty sexy but as soon as he got the Bonneaus safely across the Coosa River, on their way home the following day, in miniature flood visited the city and several other good rains fell during his stay. Mr. Tye says that on his way home Tuesday night he came through one of the heaviest rainstorms he ever saw. The water was running almost over the curbs at Troy. However, he says that the rain played out at Jack and they came on into Elba over dusty roads.

VICTORIA—Rev. W. J. Hughes announced that a revival meeting will start at Victoria Methodist Church Monday night, July 20. Rev. Gilbert and Hughes will do the preaching.

FORMER PASTOR—Rev. R. A. Foster, former pastor, will preach at the morning service at the Elba Methodist Church, Sunday, July 19. Rev. Foster, recently superannuated, says he is by no means worn out as a preacher, but he told the bishop at the last annual conference that in view of his 40 years of service, he believed it proper to step aside and make room for some of the younger preachers who are knocking at the door for conference. Come out and hear Brother Foster.

HOT WEATHER—Tuesday was the hottest day of an unusually hot summer. The thermometer in front of the Elba Hardware Company store store reached a peak of 101 in mid-afternoon. A thermometer on the north side of Smith Brothers' store registered 100 degrees at six p.m. Temperature readings remained high throughout the night and sleepless condition were decidedly uncomfortable. Clouds gathered early in the afternoon in the north and west. Lightning flashed and thunder rolled almost continuously, but the clouds failed to bring a measure of the hoped-for moisture. Mrs. R. L. Cooper risks her reputation as a weather prophet by stating DROWNED—Willie Frank Tyson, 11-year-old negro boy, was drowned Monday afternoon while swimming in the "mill hole" back of the City schoolhouse. According to some of his boy companions, Willie Frank remarked: "What'll we do my stuff?" He dived into the deep water and was seen no more. The boys were so badly frightened that they ran away and failed to report the drowning for some time. Finally, Dr. W. R. Crook and several other white men were called to the scene, but it was something like 45 minutes after the boy made his fatal dive until Bonnie Jacobs dived into the water where the boys said Willie Frank disappeared, and came up with the body the first trial. First aid was administered and everything possible was done to restore respiration, but to no avail. Although the "mill hole" has been a popular swimming place for Elbans for many years, and thousands of men, women, boys and girls have used it throughout the years, it is said that Monday's drowning was the first, at least for many years. The tragedy caused a considerable excitement in otherwise enjoyable Indepesia or Day celebration by the colored population.

WINNING TEAMS—Manager Ellis Smith's fast-stepping baseball team continues its winning ways. Its only defeat, so far as reported, was at the hands of the Centennial nine, in a loosely-played game on the Goodman diamond. There between the fourth and fifth innings the Centennial team is not the only winning baseball aggregation of Elba. Elba has the first, at least, for many years. The tragedy occurred in unmistakable form when otherwise enjoyable Indepesia or Day celebration by the colored population.

TROY WON — The Trojans, by defeating Abbeville Monday afternoon in the last game of the schedule, won the Ozark championship of the Enterprise Barons, won the first half pennant in the Alabama-Florida league in one of the closest races on record. The leadership during the last two weeks was shared by Enterprise, Troy and Ozark, a win or loss changing the standing from day to day. The second half of the season commenced with Tuesday's games. If Enterprise can maintain its present pitching staff, together with the good support being given the chunkers by other members of the team, the chances are that Troy will be hard to beat in the second half.

CORRECTION—Mr. John Brown asks me to make the following corrections in regard to the published account of the fire that destroyed the home of Mr. Grady Sorenson: Mr. Brown makes the following statement: "The fire didn't start at 11 o'clock, but about 9:30, and, too, the shingles didn't get burned but were saved by being across the roof under a metal tier. Instead of $200 worth of shingles there were about $50 worth."

CLEAN UP—It would have been suggested that before we have our annual home-coming week, Elbans should clean up their premises and the city should have an annual street-cleaning.

* * * *

NEW PORCH — Extensive improvements are under way at the J. L. Morrow and F. F. Clark home on West Rushing Street. The old porch is being torn away and replaced by massive brick pillars. Extending around almost the entire east and south sides of the large house, the new porch will be one of the most commodious in the city.

LOW WATER — The extended drought which has prevailed in this section for several weeks has caused Pea River, White Water and Beaver Dam Creeks to register the lowest stages in several years. The water stage at the dam, below Elba, is so low that only part-time schedule of operation of the power plant are being carried out.

* * * *

OUT TO CAMP — Members of Elba's National Guard unit, 117th Field Artillery, left Saturday morning on their annual camping expedition at Camp Jackson, S.C. The boys will be in camp from July 5 to 19.

SYMPATHY—Dr. H. T. Donoho, Mrs. D. Bryan Moseley, Mrs. Will Donovan and other Elba relatives have the sincere sympathy of their friends in their bereavement caused by the death of their father, L. T. Donovan, of Marion, who died Sunday afternoon in a Selma hospital as a result of an automobile accident which occurred near Selma Saturday. Mr. Donovan was a prominent planter of the Marion section. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon.

VACATION — Harold Deal, Smith Brothers' road salesman, is taking his annual vacation this week. A trip to the Gulf is reported to be a part of the week's program.

* * * *

MELON KING — Besides being an expert pig dentist, Mr. O. C. Smith has for several years been recognized as the champion melon grower of this section. Mr. Smith has been supplying the local market with numerous loads of big melons and Tuesday he got in a melon weighing hundreds of pounds. Mr. Smith visited the Elba Herald office on Tuesday and left a melon weighing 36 pounds on the desk of Editor Clark. Mr. Smith is indebted to him for two fine specimens of his melon growing handiwork.

CONVALESCING—Roscoe Deal and Joe Crook have returned home from Edge hospital at Troy and are reported to be convalescing satisfactorily.

STATE DEPT. ADDS ANOTHER GRADE TO FREE BOOK LIST

MONTGOMERY—Orders for free text books to be distributed to second grade pupils of Alabama's public schools will be placed immediately, according to Dr. J. A. Keller, State Superintendent of Education.

Purchase of the second grade books will mark the second step in the plan to provide free texts to children of the first eight grades in accordance with an administration bill passed by the 1935 Legislature. An appropriation of $125,000 is provided for the purpose.

"Dr. Keller and the free text books bill was "one of the greatest things ever done for the school children of Alabama." Books for first grade children were purchased last year with an appropriation of $175,000.

"The plan was a boon, especially to children of unemployed families," Dr. Keller said. "Thousands of children in the State had gone to school for two or three years without the aid of books, or had only one or two. Superintendents reported much better work among the small children, and the books were returned in excellent condition."

The first grade books used during the past year will be distributed among new first graders next fall, and the new books will be given to second grade students. Dr. Keller said reports from various counties indicated that only a few books were lost or damaged.

Plans for second grade books will be placed immediately so they may be delivered by the opening of school in September.

MR. BOLAND WRITES FROM GAINESVILLE, GA.

Gainesville, Ga., July 2.

Dear Editor:

Here I am way up here with John and Mary in this town where so many lost their lives. Oh, we do not think this a mean city for every one we meet seems so nice. We all thought our own little town of Elba was badly torn—it was only a shadow of this storm, with Elba one or two deaths, while Gainesville had nearly 200. For many miles that storm took trees and farm houses wherever it found them.

I must change my subject and tell you of my trip on the first day of July up on the mountains of North Georgia and North Carolina. John and Mary, Mrs. Boland and myself went on a new Dodge, and the road was fine. I was busy watching the crops and the fine peach and apple orchards and wheat, oats and rye that was cut and shocked. It was a beautiful scene to behold. The road was dotted with beautiful homes and lots of real nice little towns. It has been so dry here that the crops are late, but there was a fine shower yesterday. It is distressing to see and learn of so many places where they have not had rain and you see the time is drawing nigh when it will be too late for rain to make corn.

The President has told Secretary Wallace to get in the dry streaks in the West and buy up the cattle and put them where they can get water and food, but it is time the people were getting on their knees. We are a haughty and stiff-necked people.

We reached our first mountain at Tallulah Falls. I can't tell you how I felt when I walked in that that little dance hall and looked down on the rocks that were one time the bed of a river. . Will you just stop a minute and go with me as I lift my eyes up and up to view the most beautiful scene I ever witnessed—to look down and make me tremble? But as we looked up a thousand feet were amazed. God said there is nothing made that He did not make. I wish I could paint that picture for you, but no painter can paint it nor no poet can pen it, to tell its beauty. I am so full of joy to think how nicely nature has dressed the first mountain of my old native home to peep upon. No mother placing the flowers around the grave of her loved one could place them so nicely as nature has the beautiful flowers and trees on those mountains.

We drove up on Sunrise and Sunset Mountains at Highlands, N. C. We ate dinner up there. I could hardly eat for looking away down into the valley. There were some houses down there and we could see a nice farm. I do not know how they got there, but I had rather be up on top than in the valley. Of course I would not like to get on the one that stood in front of me. It was so high till I do not think any one has ever been on top of it. It was lined from top to bottom with beautiful trees and shrubbery. When I walked over to the sunset side to see the view, my heart almost failed me to look down that great rock. I could look down, down, and, oh, it was so far down till it almost took my breath and right now I am thinking of that great man Moses; how he led Israel out of Egypt thru the wilderness and God called upon Sinai. He left Aaron down at the foot of the mountain and as Moses did not hurry back, Aaron made a golden calf and Moses came down with the two tables of stone with the Ten Commandments. His people were worshiping the calf. Moses was very angry and threw down the Commandments and broke them and God told him to step aside and let Him slay them, but Moses begged God to spare the people. But Moses finally got angry with Israel and disobeyed God and God told him He would not let him go over to that beautiful land, but Moses begged God to let him go over, so one day God called Moses to come on the mountain and He would let him look at Canaan, so He showed the north and south, east and west but God let Moses die on the mountain and buried him there and no man has ever seen his grave.

On our return from Highland, N. C., we came around a range of mountains. Some times it looked like we were too close to the edge to make us feel good. One time Mary stopped the car for me to look down on a beautiful river. I told her to just drive on. I tell you I was kinder scared. One time we drove under a rock. There was a nice little branch pouring over it. The road was cut under it. The water just did miss the road.

Well, I must close. I will leave here tomorrow for Atlanta, and will go to Columbus Saturday. Will stay there till the twelfth, and go home, sweet home, for there is no place like home. Best wishes to all.

FARMER JONES AND HIS COW PEN

By JUDGE W. M. BRUNSON

A farmer often thinks that he is through with his work and it sometimes happens that we sit idly by for a few weeks while we really are of the opinion that there is nothing to do on the farm. Such a state of mind is very misleading, as a farmer never gets through. No other class of men have as much work to do as does a farmer. We need and should take a few days off occasionally for rest but there is no such thing as a real farmer getting through with his work. The work comes or grows as time passes and there is no way for us to be up with it unless we hire a great number of hands and do it all in a short length of time. This is the time of the year that we farmers generally take a rest and most of us call it laying-by time. A tenant farmer of the worthless type does not try to do much work from now until gathering time. He takes the position that he has worked hard all the year and that his weary body is entitled to a much needed rest. The truth about the matter is that this farmer did not start his crop until about the middle of March and since that time his wife and children have done most of the work while he pranced up and down the roads or loitered about the country store. Such a farmer is not entitled to the first day's rest and has no right to waste the rest of his time before gathering time. None of us are entitled to a rest except those of us who have really worked in making our crop. If we have done an honest part in making this crop we are entitled to a rest of as much time as it takes to make us feel satisfied about the matter. But if we will only do the right thing about it we shill find ourselves still working while our wives are away on a much-needed rest. The women of this section are the ones who need a rest or vacation. The average housewife on the farm in this section does about twice as much work in a day as does her husband. She must do the house work, help on the farm and at the same time put up with our cussedness. All this must be done while she is poorly clad and half fed. Your wife is the one who has earned a vacation and I want to suggest to you that you allow her to lay her crop by about two weeks ahead of yours. Let her stop the work she has been doing all the year and after you have observed her in taking her vacation you should know better how to spend yours. If you are a poor man who does not own his home you should not take much vacation. Your laying by time should be a time for some new work and this should be kept up until you are able to provide a home for your loved ones. The man who does not have a home, has failed to that extent in being a good provider and he should not slacken his efforts until he has provided a good home for those who love and trust him. The Master said, "He who fails to provide for his own household is worse than an infidel." Please note that nothing is said about how we are to provide. This statement is broad and general and we must provide shelter, clothing, food, protection, medicine and love if we meet this requirement. So let me appeal to you to take a very short vacation or laying-by rest until after you have fully provided for your family. There are hundreds of things which we should do at this time of the year and unless we do many of them at this time we cannot hope to do them at all. So select those things which need doing and use your time this summer in putting these jobs over in a big way.

* * * * *

One of the many things to be done on the farm during the summer months is the digging and lining of a meat pit in your smoke-house. Many of us lose all or a large portion of our meat because we do not know how to properly cure it. The farmer who has a real meat pit and who uses it properly never loses any meat. I have been talking with a good farmer in this county who has saved his meat for nine years without the loss of a single piece. This farmer knows how to cure his meat and he does it by the rules. You, too, can save all your meat if you will do it as this man does. This is not the time of the year to talk about curing meat but it is the time to talk about making your preparations for this work. I would like to tell you how to prepare for this work and I hope you get things ready now as you will not have the time when you kill hogs. This is a job which should be done on rainy days as it is cooler on those days and you will not get so hot. Dig a pit in your smoke-house about three feet wide, six feet long and about four feet deep. The soil taken from this pit should be carried out of the smoke-house as you will not need it in the building. Build a frame in this pit of poles or scantlings and line the frame with good tight lumber. You simply need a box that fits the hole but the frame of the box should be on the outside of the box. The box should be tight enough to hold your salt but it must not be water tight as the water from your meat should be absorbed by the earth. Do not fill in around the box as your meat does not need to absorb high or low temperature from the earth. When your box is completed you should build a nice lid which will fit it and this lid should be real tight. The top of your box should come about six inches above the top of the ground so grit will not get into the box. After the box has been completed, the lid should be placed on it and it should remain closed until you kill your hogs. When you decide to kill hogs is the exact time you should open up your box, clean it out thoroughly and place about one hundred pounds of ice in the center of your box. Then go ahead with the killing of your hogs. Your meat should be spread the first night just as you have always done and then packed down in your box the next morning. Use plenty of salt and pack your meat in the two ends of the box. Try to arrange so the water from the ice will not get on your meat. It will be all right to put the ice in one end of the box if you prefer. I know of one man who has one end of his box lower than the other so his ice water cannot get to the meat. He puts the ice in the lower end and water goes from the meat. It is not necessary to cure your meat in small pieces if you follow this plan. You may leave the line-bones on your hams and they will keep beautifully if you do the job correctly. You should keep ice in this box for about thirty days, at which time your meat will be ready to come up and be smoked. If your box is tight and the lid is kept on it you will be surprised how little ice will be needed. If you will put in 100 pounds to begin with and then about 50 pounds each week thereafter you will do the job well. About 250 pounds of ice will care for a nice pile of meat. You could sell one nice shoulder for enough to pay for the ice used in curing five large hogs. This box will also be a nice place to keep your sausage, ribs and backbone if you wish to eat it without salting it down. I suggest that you do not fill the space around your box as it will keep the dirt away from your meat but if you leave this space open you should place boards over the top of the hole and cover the boards with earth so the cold air cannot get out. If you cannot do this, then fill around your box with earth. I have found that those farmers who use this plan always save their meat while the others save and lose according to the seasons. I hope you build yourself a good meat box in the ground and that you start this fall to curing and selling nice meat in your neighborhood. This plan will help to make you a good provider.

* * * * *

Not more than one farmer in ten has a decent place to store his seed. It will soon be time to save your cotton seed, Spanish peanuts, running peanuts, velvet beans, corn and the other things grown on your farm. We need a nice clean room for our seed. This room should be rat-proof and should be prepared so as to be securely locked at all times. If we have a nice place to store our seed we will take much more pains in saving good seed. Most of us do not even think about seed until the spring of the year and then we take just anything we can get. This is a very poor practice and is costing us money every year. It should not take you more than one day to build a rat-proof room for your seed and since you need that room so badly why not do it this week? Send your wife to the coast for a rest and while she is gone you could build this seed room. She would appreciate it when she returns and she might also find a nice meat pit in the smoke-house.

GOOD ADVICE WHETHER JESUS' WRITING OR NOT

Mr. Jim Talbot, who is an earnest Bible student, requests that The Clipper publish the following lines taken from the Memphis Commercial Appeal, 25 years ago:

"It is said to have been written by Christ Himself, just after His crucifixion. It was placed under a stone at the foot of His cross and was found by a little child. The letter reads as follows:

"Whosoever works on the Sabbath day shall be cursed. I command you to go to church and keep holy the Lord's day without any manner of work. You shall not idle or spend your time in bedecking yourself with superfluities of costly apparel and vain dressing, for I have ordered it a day of rest, and will have that day kept holy, that your sins be forgiven you. You will not break My commandments, but you will observe and keep them, they being written by My hand and spoken by My mouth. Not only go to church yourselves, but allow your man-servants and maid-servants, and observe My words and hear My commandments. You will finish your work every Saturday afternoon at six o'clock, at which time the preparation of the Sabbath begins. I advise you to fast five days in the year, beginning on Good Friday and continuing the five days following, in remembrance of My death for you. You shall love one another and cause them that are not baptized to come to the church and receive the sacrament, that is to say, baptism, and then the supper of the Lord, and be made a member thereof, and in so doing, I will give you a long life and many blessings. Your land will be replenished and bring forth abundantly and will comfort you in the greatest temptation, and surely he that doeth to the contrary of this letter, written by My own hand, and spoken out of My open mouth, and keepeth it, without publishing it to others, shall not prosper, but he that publishes it to others shall be blessed by Me, if their sons be as many as the stars of the night, and if they believe not this letter and My commandments, I will have My plague upon you, and you will be consumed, with your children, goods and chattels and all other worldly goods that I have given you. If you do it will be well with you in the world which is to come. Whosoever shall keep a copy of this letter and keep it in the house, nothing shall harm them, neither pestilence, thunder nor lightning, and if any woman be in birth and put her trust in Me, she shall be delivered of her child. You shall hear no more news of Me except through the holy scriptures until the day of judgment. All goodness and prosperity shall be in the houses where a copy of this letter shall be found."

BILIOUSNESS

Laxative combination folks know is trustworthy

The confidence thousands of parents have in good, old reliable, powdered Thedford's Black-Draught has prompted them to get the new Syrup of Black-Draught for their children. The grown folks stick to the powdered Black-Draught; the youngsters probably will prefer it when they outgrow their childish love of sweets. . . Mrs. C. W. Adams, of Murray, Ky., writes: "I have used Thedford's Black-Draught (powder) about thirteen years, taking it for biliousness. Black-Draught acts well and I am always pleased with the results. I wanted a good, reliable laxative for my children. I have found Syrup of Black-Draught to be just that."

FIRST INSTALLMENT

Silas Spelle gripped his black stogie more firmly between his yellow teeth and, leaning across Ed Starbuck's desk, pounded a huge fist upon the oaken top to add emphasis to his words.

"By God, yuh've got to do something, Starbuck," he snapped harshly. "You know and I know and everybody else knows yore damned bank is on the verge of going under. Yuh couldn't pay off yore depositors now, not four-bits on the dollar. I'm offerin' yuh a fair proposition. As I told yuh before, I'll buy up the mortgages yuh hold and I'll pay every cent yuh loaned on them plus interest to date. That's a damn good offer—yuh know it is."

"Perhaps," replied Starbuck quietly. "But it ain't enough, Spelle. Those mortgages represent more than just collateral to me. They represent faith—faith in me and my bank by the men who gave them. In time they'll all be taken up. Present conditions won't last forever. The price of beef is beginning to climb. The drought is broken. No, Spelle, you or no other man has got enough money to tempt me to double-cross my friends."

"Faith — faith hell," snorted Spelle. "Yuh'll starve to death while yuh're rantin' about faith. Yuh're a hell of an excuse of a business man. Yuh better consider my proposition, Starbuck. If I tip off the bank examiner in Westhaven he'll put the skids under yuh pronto. But I don't want to do that. My offer stands. I'll give yuh until this time next week to think it over. I'll be back for an answer then."

Spelle stood up, a big, thick-set man whose loose, thick lips and close set eyes mirrored plain the consuming passion of his life. Greed! Greed and selfishness.

"Remember," he bit out, stepping to the door of Starbuck's office. "By this time next week I'll expect yuh to get back to common sense. If yuh won't talk turkey then, why—" He finished with a significant gesture, which consisted of holding out one grimy, hairy hand, then closing it slowly, as though to crush whatever lay within it.

"Wait!"

Ed Starbuck was now on his feet, a tall, gaunt, leathery faced man, whose drooping tawny mustache bracketed a pair of grim, tight lips. Beneath his faded, bushy eyebrows his eyes looked out clear and blue and cold. His left sleeve hung empty, for the arm was off at the shoulder, a reminder of an old rustling war when he himself had been a cattleman. But the lean right hand was sound and with it he lifted a heavy, worn Colt revolver from the drawer of his desk and laid it on the scarred surface before him.

"Yuh've had yore say, Spelle," he drawled, his words dripping contempt and scorn. "Now I'll have mine. What I just told yuh stands, this week, next week or any other week. Yore damned money ain't worth hell room in this bank. Faith—no, yuh don't know the meaning of the word. Greed is yore war-cry."

Thick blood congested Spelle's beefy features. His lips parted in a snarl. He tried to match looks, but failed. Those icy blue eyes of the valiant old banker seered like live flames and the implacable courage behind them was unmistakable. Spelle cursed venomously and left.

Ed Starbuck stood for a long time after Spelle had gone. The fire in his eyes slowly faded and hopelessness took its place. He sank back into his chair like an old man who was suddenly very weary. Ed Starbuck had always been a man who faced facts squarely, regardless of what those facts might be. He faced them now. Spelle had told the truth. The Cattleman's Bank of Carillion was on the narrow edge. True, Starbuck held mortgages that would more than put him on his feet should he sell them out. But this, according to Starbuck's standards, would be breaking faith with men he had known all his life and who trusted him. Still he had to have money—cash. There was only one thing to do. He would ride around to the different cattle outfits and put his problem squarely up to the owners. They all stood to stand or fall together. If they could somehow help his bank to weather through they would have Spelle whipped. If they didn't— Starbuck sighed, reached for his hat and went out into the street.

The little cowtown of Carillion was drowsing in the heat of mid-afternoon. The single, dusty street lay white and glaring in the sun, and was deserted save for a barefoot Mexican or two and a pair of cow-ponies slouching at the hitching rail before Jake Butterfield's Emporium. Starbuck angled across the street toward the livery stable and corral at the northern end of town.

A few moments later he emerged from the livery stable, leading a saddle horse. He swung into the saddle and headed south along the street. As he did so two punchers clanked out of Butterfield's and forked the two cow-ponies. They also headed south. The horses of the two strangers looked somewhat jaded and Starbuck soon overtook them. The elder of the riders looked up. He was a wiry, leathery-faced man, past middle age, clean shaven and with innumerable wrinkles about the corners of his mouth and eyes. The mouth seemed harsh, yet a humorous quirk lingered about it somehow. The eyes were clear, fleckless gray, capable of either warmth or abysmal chill. The wide weather beaten sombrero rested on a mane of silvery hair. One of the real old timers, decided Starbuck.

The other rider was young, somewhere in his early twenties. Well set up, with flat muscled, powerful shoulders. His face was smooth and tanned, his eyes blue, his hair curly and brown. Gay, sparkling youth lay over him like a mantle. A clean, lusty, carefree kid, in love with life and hungering for all its wonders. Their clothes were those of the range worn but substantial. Both carried a heavy gun, slung at the right hip.

The elder of the two nodded to Starbuck.

"Howdy," he drawled. "Wonder could yuh show us the trail to the Box D outfit? Gent back in the store told us mebbe they could use a couple of hands out there."

"Sure," replied Starbuck. "Glad to. Fact is, I'm riding out there myself. Glad to have company."

"You ain't San Juan Delevan by any chance?"

"No. I'm Ed Starbuck. I own the Cattleman's Bank, back in town."

"Shore. I'm glad to know yuh. I'm Tex Whipple. This chuckle-haided cub is Johnny Clehoe. Kid, shake hands with Mr. Starbuck."

Introductions over, the three jogged steadily south. Tex and Starbuck rode side by side while Johnny brought up the rear, gazing with lazy eyes over the heat-shimmered sage.

"That big plateau straight ahead is the Box D range," said Starbuck presently. "One of the finest holdings in the country. Lots of water, fine pasture and a stand of pine trees what gives the lie to this damned desert. I shore envy ole San Juan, livin' up among those cool trees."

"Runs a pretty good spread, does he?" asked Tex.

"Yeah. Ordinarily it's A-1. He's had some hard luck lately though. Two months ago he was drivin' a thousand head of prime Herefords across the upper end of the Kanab Desert to the shippin' pens at Sawtelle an' they sprung a stampede. 'Tween the desert an' some rustlers he lost better'n eight hundred head. It was a damn heavy jolt. They was prime stock, the pick of his herd. Then he got his spine hurt in the stampede besides. Hoss tripped an' threw him. Doc says he's due to sit in a wheel chair for the rest of his days."

"Shore that's tough," nodded Tex. "Mebbe the kid an' me'll have our ride for nothin'."

"Can't say as to that. Punchers do a lot of driftin' this time o' year. Delevan may be able to use yuh."

It was a deep game Spelle was playing. His determination to smash Ed Starbuck was only a step toward the fulfillment of a long thwarted hate. Spelle's real objective was that immense expanse of valuable plateau range controlled by San Juan Delevan. There lay the water and grazing which Spelle could find use for during the dry, torrid summer months. As for the other smaller ranchers, they also would sink if Starbuck's bank went under. But Spelle gave them little thought. Small fry, he told himself contemptuously.

There was another motive to Silas Spelle's hatred of San Juan Delevan. It dated back many, many years. It began the day Martha Wingate had married Delevan after scorning Spelle's advances. Her death, three years after the marriage, when she gave her life to bring a baby daughter into the world, caused Spelle to gloat. What he could not have himself, he wanted no other man to hold. And he had never forgiven Delevan for winning the woman he himself had set his heart on.

"You!" he croaked harshly. "The papers said yuh were dead."

The lamp in Spelle's office glowed yellow. In its light Spelle was like a bloated, poisonous thing, intent upon his plotting. Once or twice the windows rattled. A dim form stole from the darkness outside and crossed the patio. The side door to Spelle's office swung slowly back. The flame of the lamp wavered and flickered. Spelle turned. His face blanched and his jaw dropped slightly. Fear lay stark in his eyes. He was like a man gazing upon a ghost. He ran a thick tongue over his lips.

"You!" he croaked harshly. "The papers said yuh were dead. They found yore body ground to pieces along the track of the S. W. & P."

"Yeah," snarled the newcomer. "They think they did. I out-foxed 'em. that's all. What they found was a damned hobo with my prison clothes on him. Well—don't sit starin' at me like I was a ghost. I'm real—damned real. Why don't yuh greet yore long lost son like a father should?"

"Yuh're no son of mine," rasped Spelle hoarsely. "I—"

"Oh, yes, I am," cut in the other. "Not accordin' to law mebbe —but like the highbrows say—I'm a natural son. Not that I'm proud of my parents. My mother a Ute squaw — my father a damned crooked skunk what would betray his own flesh and blood. I came back — I told yuh I would, yuh snivelin' hypocrite. I didn't ask to come into the world, God knows. Yuh're responsible for me and, by God, yuh're gonna take care of me. I want food and I want whiskey an' a bunk to sleep in. I crossed the Kanab Desert on foot to get here—an' here I stay. If yuh try to set the flatties on me I go out shootin'—an' you get the first bullet. Think it over."

Silas Spelle paled at the words and manner of his illegitimate, half-breed son. When he had read of that son's escape from the State Penitentiary road-gang, stark terror had struck him. Then when another dispatch came thru that his son's mangled body had been found by a track walker on the railroad he had sighed with relief. It meant the last tie to an embarrassing past had been severed. But the dispatches were wrong, and here was the son in flesh to mock him.

Unconsciously Silas Spelle stood up. "There's whiskey on the shelf over there. I'll go to the kitchen an' rustle yuh some grub."

A. J. MORROW,
Tax Collector, Coffee County, Ala.

jy16-23.

DEATH OF R. L. MOORE

The darkest hour to the Moore family came Sunday morning, July 5th, 1936, as the wife and children stood around the bed and watched the soul of the precious father and husband, R. L. Moore, change its burdened cross for a starry crown of glory. To let him go seemed more than our hearts could bear, yet it was a happy hour in the sight of God.

Mr. Moore was born in 1867. If he had lived until August 12, he would have been 69 years of age. When he was 25 years old he was married to Miss Laura Richardson. To this union were born nine children: six boys, R. D. Moore of Alexander City; L. B. Moore, Cusseta, Ga.; J. M. Moore, Ruben Moore, Vershow Moore and Julius Moore of Elba; three daughters, Mrs. Eva Woodruff, Alexander City; Mrs. Leona Chaney of Wadley, Ala., and Mrs. Estelle Hattaway.

Mr. Moore joined the Christian Church when he was a young man and was a faithful servant of the Lord. How hard it was to give him up, but God knows best, so He took him out of his sufferings. He was sick three weeks.

Funeral services were held at Bradshaw Church Sunday afternoon, conducted by Rev. W. V. Vershow Wallace. Burial was in the church cemetery. Samp DaWalter Moore, Eugene Moore and vis, Irvin Wise, Claudie Jones, Clarence Moore were the pallbearers.

Mr. and Mrs. Vershow Moore.

Henderson, default having been made in the payment of the debts secured thereby, the undersigned Chas. Henderson will, in foreclosure of both said mortgages, offer for sale at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, on the 28th day of July, 1936, in front of the Court House door in Elba, Alabama, within the legal hours of sale, the land conveyed by said mortgages, described as follows, to-wit:

See the New Gasoline Economy of the FORD V-8—demonstrated before your eyes!

WE have painted up a "Scottie Car" simply to demonstrate the increased mileage of this new 1936 Ford V-8. It is not a "special" Ford car. It is a regular 1936 stock model Ford V-8 with distinctive exterior decoration and a glass gallon jug connected with a Zenith tester. No adjustments have been made to make it perform differently from any new stock car. The jug is added so that you can see a measured amount of gasoline used with your own eyes, instead of having it come from the tank at the rear.

Take a ride in a "Scottie Car." See for yourself that a Ford V-8 is just as economical on gasoline as smaller, less powerful cars. You can arrange it without cost or obligation by calling— YOUR FORD DEALER

20 miles per gallon at 40 miles per hour constant driving speed — see it for yourself with glass measuring tank.

CROPS HELPED—The showers of the past few days have been of great benefit to crops of all kinds. Considerable early corn was damaged beyond the point of redemption, but most of the later planting has been helped wonderfully. Peanuts, cane, pastures and all other crops are taking on new life. Lawns, shrubbery, flowers etc. here in Elba have undergone a transformation that makes it hard to realize that a severe drought ever existed. Nature is a wonderful thing.

TOO CLEAN— Griel Tillman says the reason Dr. W. R. Croom hurled a bottle through his show window glass was because the glass had been washed so clean that it was invisible.

SINGING SCHOOL—An effort is being made to organize a singing shape singing school, to be held in the circuit court room, with S. S. Edmondson as teacher. It is said that there are a considerable number of singers and wanta-be singers in Elba who are anxious to take advantage of such an opportunity, free of cost, to learn more about seven-shape music. Mr. Edmondson is recognized as a competent instructor.

DAMASCUS LETTER

Editor, the Clipper:

We read with much interest each week the news of the county, and are always pleased to get The Clipper.

It has been, and is, still very dry in this community (Damascus), and while the crops have suffered, still the prospects are good. We are thankful that everything is as well with us, and what it is, realizing the fact that it could be worse.

The health of this community is good and everything is moving right along.

Mr. Green is moving to complete his fine new dwelling which is being erected here. When completed it will be one of the finest in the state. I tell you, we are all proud of the fine school we are going to have here. Our trustees are going to see that we get the best service possible. Hurrah for Damascus.

We are anticipating some big revival meetings here this summer. The fourth Lord's Day in this month we begin a series at the Church of Christ here (Liberty). We hope to have a real live preacher. Brailey will do the preaching.

We enjoyed reading Mr. Bolland's letter, also Mr. Spurlin's. Both were good. You are always glad to get The Clipper and feel like we are getting a letter from home.

We believe that our county (Coffee) is one of the best in the State, elected with the best officers to be had. Altogether, we are proud that we are living, and we know that God is blessing us in every way we deserve. Last, but not least, we feel that if we can seat President Roosevelt again the "old shirt" will sail right on, as it should. Here's wishing everybody all the happiness they can give.

(Signed) "SAGER."

CASH FARM INCOME ALMOST DOUBLED SINCE 1932 BY AAA

AUBURN, Ala.—Cash farm income from cotton, wheat, tobacco, corn, and hogs increased 90 per cent from 1932 to 1935, according to figures submitted in the annual report of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

"The cash income from the five major commodities increased from $1,595,000,000 in 1932 to 32,595,-000,000 in 1935, while the cash income from all other farm products increased from $3,012,000,000 in 1932 to $4,507,000,000 in 1935," says Dr. L. N. Duncan, director of the State Extension Service, in releasing the report.

"These figures combined show that the annual cash income from farm products increased from $4,777,000,000 in 1932 to $6,700-000,000 in 1935. Rental and benefit payments accounted for nearly 25 per cent of this increase. The remainder is attributed to increase in prices."

Mrs. Mamie B. Hill of Elba and Miss Henrietta Coston of Troy are attending a business conference of women workers in Tuscaloosa this week.

TON-LITTER PIGS WILL BRING CHICAGO PRICES

AUBURN, Ala.—All hogs weighing over 160 pounds on exhibit at the ton-litter show in Montgomery on September 10 will bring the producers Chicago prices, announces E. F. W. The door handle of an automobile was driven into the arm of Joseph Vierra, 40, of Antioch, California, when the car ran in passing, swerved too close to him.

When her goldfish fell out of its bowl and cut itself nearly in half, Mrs. Wallace Powell of Washington, D. C., took her needle and thread and sewed it up. Next day it was swimming around with its customary abandon.

Willie Anderson of St. Joseph, Mo., convicted of a larceny in which his loot was one safety razor blade, was sent to jail for a term of six months.

While she was cleaning a mounted buckhead in the breakfast nook of her home in Eugene, Ore., Mrs Elmer Geiger was gored when it fell on her.

'Home-Coming' Celebration Postponed Due To Infantile Paralysis Epidemic In State

Elba's home-coming celebration has been postponed indefinitely. The second annual event, planned for the week of August 2nd to 8th, has been called off on account of the epidemic of poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis) which is now raging in several counties in the Northern part of the State.

The general committee postponed the celebration in accordance with advice of County and State Health authorities, who are endeavoring to check the spread of the dread disease by preventing any and all public meetings or gatherings. Preparations, which were well under way, with some very entertaining programs already planned, have been ordered halted.

So far as has been reported, only one or two cases of infantile paralysis have been reported in South Alabama, but in the Northern part of the State new cases are being reported every day, and the epidemic seems to be moving Southward. Last week it was thought that health authorities had succeeded in combating the disease, but the reports coming in reported every day now and more drastic measures may be put in force.

Up to Wednesday a total of 181 cases had been reported in the State, with 11 deaths. Use of a nasal spray which is said to be a pretty good preventive is recommended, especially in those sections adjacent to the affected areas. In many places far removed from the epidemic, the spray is being used regularly.

State - wide and county - wide gatherings are being postponed in every section of the State, and in a number of towns and cities all public gatherings are being closed to children.

The committee feels that a postponement of the home-coming celebration is the wise and proper action, and all preparations have been abandoned.

FRED COOK TRANSFERRED TO OFFICE AT ANDALUSIA

Fred Cook, local manager for the Alabama Water Service Company for the past several years, has just received notice that he will be transferred to the Andalusia office of the company on or about August 1st.

The transfer comes as a promotion for Mr. Cook, who will spend the major portion of his time in the office handling "complaints," and at the same time he will devote some time to merchandising. It was stated that the new position carries a nice increase in salary.

Fred has made a splendid record in the Elba office, having been a leader in the merchandising department of the company. He has also looked after other company interests with diligence. Elba regrets to lose the fine Mr. and Mrs. Cook and their little daughter, the transfer requiring that they move to Andalusia to make their home.

Mr. Dorman, who has been cashier in the Opp office of the company, will be transferred to Elba, according to the announcement.

COMPLIANCE WORK IN 1936 FARM PROGRAM TO BEGIN

The County Agent has received notice from the State Agricultural Conservation Committee stating that full instructions relative to measuring and mapping cooperating farms under the 1936 Agricultural Conservation Program would be sent to the county within a few days.

The compliance work in connection with this year's farm program will be similar to that which has been required in the past. However, this year's work will go more into detail. This year's program calls for a map of each cooperating farm. The map, in addition to showing the outside boundaries of the farm, must show the relative position of all fields, pastures, streams, roads, buildings, woods and other physical features.

It is hoped that the ownership map of this county made by the WPA can be used to an advantage in establishing the outside boundaries of the cooperating farms. If this map is not suitable for this work it will be necessary to get the outside boundaries of each cooperating farm from tax records and other sources.

Due to the detailed map required this year we had hoped to use the plane table method in obtaining it, but upon investigation the officials found this method too expensive. For this reason the maps will be sketched and all measurements made with a chain. The chain method was used in the county last year.

Before a cooperating farmer can make application for his grant this year a form, "Report of Performance," must be executed. Before this form can be executed it will be necessary to have the acre measurements of the following:

General Soil Depleting Crops:

Corn alone.

Corn interplanted.

Oats harvested for grain or hay and not followed by summer legumes.

Potatoes, Irish and sweet.

Truck and vegetable crops.

Grain sorghum.

Special Soil Depleting Crops:

Cotton.

Peanuts harvested for nuts.

Soil Conserving Crops:

Summer legumes, including peanuts pastured.

Summer legumes interplanted with corn.

Summer legumes following small grains.

In addition to the above, it will be necessary to have the acre measurements of the following:

Idle crop land not terraced in 1936.

Idle crop land terraced in 1936.

The above information is given with the hope that the farmers of the county will realize the tremendous amount of work involved this year in getting our forms in shape for payment and will continue to give them responsible for doing this work their full cooperation.

HUGH D. SEXTON,
County Agent.

20TH ANNIVERSARY OF FARM LOAN SYSTEM CELEBRATED

Observing this week the 20-year anniversary of the passing of the Farm Loan Act of 1916, which marked the beginning of cooperative credit in the United States, Mr. Edward B. Green, president of the Federal Land Bank of New Orleans, announced that the outstanding amount of Federal land bank loans in Coffee County increased from $1,036,051 in July, 1933, when the Farm Credit Administration was organized, to $1,405,675, the face amount of the land bank and Land Bank Commissioner loans outstanding at the beginning of 1936.

"This large advance in the amount of loans outstanding has made very little, if any, increase in the total overhead indebtedness of Coffee County farmers," said Mr. Green, "since farmers used about nine out of every ten dollars borrowed to pay off already existing debts owed to banks, insurance companies, merchants, and other concerns and individuals."

"Since the Farm Credit Administration undertook to reopen the channels of agricultural credit," continued Mr. Green, "the outstanding amount of loans in Alabama have increased greatly. Within the past three years of its existence farm foreclosure sales, which had increased to the highest rates on record during the depression, have been cut in half.

"The Farm Credit Administration has reduced directly the interest rates of one in every three farmers with mortgages, and out of every $3 of interest the average farmer paid before refinancing, he now pays only $2, and keeps the other in his own pocket. The total interest saving to Alabama and Louisiana farmers as a result of refinancing amounts to thousands of dollars a year."

Mrs. Joe Frank Prescott, who recently underwent an appendix operation in Troy, returned to her home in Elba yesterday. Friends trust that she may soon be fully recovered.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Purvis, Jr., and little son, Edward III, of Rocky Mount, N. C., are visiting Judge and Mrs. J. A. Carnley and family.

About People and Things

By C. B. McDowell

HISTORY—The drought is no more. Copious showers have fallen all over Coffee County during the past week and growing crops have responded in a wonderful way. The severe heat wave has also been broken. Instead of the 100-plus temperatures that prevailed previous to the advent of the cooling showers, we are now enjoying maximum thermometer readings in the low nineties. The nights are delightfully cool. In fact, they are of the summer-resort variety.

* * * * *

CROPS—It is remarkable what a transformation can be brought about within a few days by a few life-giving showers. What seemed, ten days ago, to be corn fields that were burned up almost to the point of destruction have turned green and give promise of making a fair crop. Late planted corn is growing rapidly and bids fair to make a bumper crop. Pastures are fully recovered from the drought. Cotton has been shedding to some extent in localities where morning rains have filled the open blossoms, but the weevil has been making a great growth to make up for time lost earlier in the season. With plenty of sunshine during the next few weeks, Coffee County will probably produce a normal cotton crop. It should not be compared with last year's yield of over 21,000 bales, which was about 25 per cent above normal. Farmers are happy in the knowledge that they will not be handicapped this year by having to secure certificates, but can sell all the cotton they gin, and at prices that promise to be quite satisfactory. The peanut crop in Coffee County never looked better and prices will probably be more than average for the past several years. Things are looking pretty rosy for Coffee County.

* * * * *

DISAPPOINTED—Leaders of both old political parties were sorely disappointed when the great Townsend Plan convention at Cleveland, Ohio, last week failed to split up into warring factions and end up in a free-for-all squabble, as was predicted by some of the "wise guys." Instead, the approximately 10,000 delegates voted almost unanimously to support the Plan in its entirety and not to endorse a third party movement. The sense of the convention was to center all the efforts of the organization toward electing congressmen and senators favorable to the Plan, in the November elections. Instead of breaking up in confusion, as old-line politicians predicted and hoped it would, the Townsend convention, the most largely attended and enthusiastic ended in a regular love feast. Regardless of what action some of the leaders may take from time to time, a great principle is involved, and the millions of Townsendites, residing in every community, county and State, represent a political force that has to be reckoned with. The Montgomery Advertiser and other newspapers to the contrary notwithstanding.

* * * * *

HOME FROM CAMP—Elba's unit of National Guardsmen, 117th Field Artillery, arrived home Sunday from Camp Jackson, S. C., where they were in camp for two weeks. The boys report one of the most enjoyable encampments they ever participated in. In fact, as Gerald Crook expressed it, the encampment would have been perfect but for the fact that one of their comrades, Olin Wanton, was taken seriously ill and had to be taken to a hospital and left behind. The boys report that the weather turned cooler shortly after they arrived in camp and was delightfully pleasant most of the time.

* * * * *

LIGHTNING—The Elba Guardsmen report that lightning struck again and again while they were in camp, on the same hill where a Guardsman from Evergreen was struck and killed two years ago. It is explained that electric power lines converge on this hill, making it a natural target for lightning. It is reported that the last bolt to strike at this point severely shocked a large number of the boys encamped there, three of them being taken to the hospital. However, none of them were fatally injured. It is said that this is the third year in succession that lightning has struck at the certain point. The Elba boys say they are thankful that it did not fall to their camp on that hill.

* * * * *

MEETING PLACE—I have been requested to agitate a movement to build a speaker's stand and wall seats under the wide-spreading oak tree in the northwest corner of the courthouse yard. It is a natural gathering place during the summer months and is one of the most comfortable spots in town. A number of our citizens have expressed an interest in the movement. Such a stand or platform, surrounded by seats, would cost only a nominal sum and would undoubtedly prove to be a popular and useful enterprise. It has been suggested that a solicitation committee will be appointed in the near future, with the object of raising the necessary funds.

* * * * *

NEWS—It is said that when a dog bites a man it is not news but when a man bites a dog that's news. One of these days we expect to announce that no rain has fallen in this locality for a whole 24 hours. That will be news.

* * * * *

SUNBURN—Elba's colony of campers who swooped down upon Seagrove, down on the Gulf, last week, returned home last Friday. All members of the party seemed to be in pretty good condition with the miserable exception of Dr. W. R. Crook and Councilman James J. English. It is reported that they participated in a 3-mile marathon race down the beach in their bathing suits. They were so severely sunburned they were hardly able to get home. Mr. English was confined to his home for several days. To show what power and has over matter—Dr. Crook went home and went to bed, a very sick doctor, but he had got much more than retired to his bed of ease when an urgent call came from a patient who always pays cash for medical services. The call was made promptly. It was followed by another call to the home of a patient who owed Dr. Crook that the money was waiting for him when the services were forthcoming. Thus, about two days and nights were spent ministering to patients in pain. Result: Dr. Crook had plenty.
